The original proposal was overwhelming in respect of height and density. The current response only tweaks at the edges in this respect. Currently Pymont is a well loved mixture of relatively low rise residential, retail and commercial buildings. The Harbourside development, the new Star hotel and the tower atop Metro East station will greatly jeopardise the ambience of Pymont. The proposal in respect of Blackwattle Bay with excessive height and density of buildings will be a nail in the coffin of the Pymont experience. High dense urban developments are plentiful in Sydney. The mix of residential, commercial and retail buildings at a human scale is rare, and should be preserved in Pymont.
